Fire on the Mountain (and Suspensions)

By Karen Leverich

I thought 2006 was a bad year for our peaks (my perspective may have been skewed due to being ordered to evacuate our home), but then along came 2007.

Where to begin? Well, first, if you want news of closures and suspensions, of cancelled/postponed/modified outings, consider joining the HPS Outings & Announcements mailing list. The easiest way to do that is to drop me a note asking to be added. My e-mail address is karen@mtpinos.com.

July 4, 2007. The fire that was to impact the greatest number of our peaks, the Zaca Fire, started a bit west of the Big Three trailhead, in Santa Barbara County. This fire burned for well over a month. It burned the entire Dick Smith Wilderness, much of the San Rafael Wilderness and many of our peaks. Within the burn perimeter were Santa Cruz Peak, San Rafael Mountain, the Big Four, Lizard Head and Hildreth. In the closed area (either the peak itself or a key part of all documented routes) are Cuyama Peak, Fox Mountain #1, and McKinley Mountain. All these peaks have been suspended.

The Potrero Seco Road route to Old Man and Monte Arido is closed, but the other route (24 miles on road and trail with 6100' of gain) is open. And if it still seems unfair that one can (for now) theoretically finish the List without the Big Three and Four backpacks, Buck Point and San Seavaine are now open for hiking and have been unsuspended. One might miss out on the two Big road slogging backpacks, but two Big road slogging day hikes are now available for your hiking enjoyment? Uh, never mind...

Following the Zaca Fire were the Butler and Butler II fires, near Butler Peak. From Charlie Knapke, in mid-September, before the huge firestorm of October: Yesterday I set off to check out if Crafts Peak really burned over. I hiked to the end of Angeles Drive and followed an old roadbed up to the top of Green Mountain Ridge to where it intersects the Little Green Valley Lake Road. From here I followed the ridge east to where it intersected the HPS Guide route that starts at Lakeview Summit. About a half mile west of Crafts I came to the edge of the burn where the fires had been stopped by a hand line. I left the road just short of the peak and hiked by it on the south slope which ten days ago was an impassable sea of Chaparral. I climbed the peak from the southeast (very unusual route for this summit) and found the small copse of trees on the summit to be the only unburned area. There was no register.

The fire was not totally out even after 24+ hours of rain. Several root systems were still on fire. The ridge from Crafts to Butler is completely burned. This means that for a short period it will be possible to do both peaks on the same hike without using snow shoes. Little Bear burned, as did Crafts. After studying the map of the closed area and reading all the fine print, it appears as if Little Bear can still be legally hiked, but that Crafts Peak, Butler Peak, and Grays Peak are all closed to hiking. Those three peaks were suspended at the November Management Committee meeting.

Then last month the Santa Anas blew and we had multiple, simultaneous fires, all over Southern California. Generally speaking, they burned near many of our peaks, but over few. At the height of the firestorm, four forests (Cleveland, San Bernadino, Angeles and Los Padres) and several state parks were closed. Fewer than 50 of our peaks were open for hiking, most of them in the southern Sierra.

Now the fires are over. The fire closures have been reduced in size but many remain. (See the bottom of this article for a list of closure maps available on the Internet.) Santiago and Modjeska Peaks did not burn, but seem to be in the (changed three times now) Santiago Fire Closure. They might be suspended at the December MComm meeting.

The Poomacha fire burned Boucher Hill and Eagle Crag. Both have been suspended.

The fires near Big Bear burned near many of our peaks, but didn't add anything to the suspended list. (Butter II got there first, sigh.) The Burchfield Fire burned much of the Sierra Pelona ridge (northeast of Santa Clarita), but didn't burn Mount McDill. (This peak was deListed in 1973 due to being on private property, but nowadays is in a County Park. Hmmm... )

Summary of suspended peaks:
01G Pilot Knob - Suspended due to private property.
SPS has explored an alternate route, which was found to be tedious, and may be deListing the peak. We might recommend this for HPS in the next election.
06C Fox Mountain #1 - Suspended, Zaca Fire
06D Cuyama Peak - Suspended, Zaca Fire
06E Lizard Head - Suspended, Zaca Fire
06F McKinley Mountain - Suspended, Zaca Fire

06I West Big Pine - Suspended, Zaca Fire
06J Big Pine Mountain - Suspended, Zaca Fire
06K Samon Peak - Suspended, Zaca Fire
06L Madulce Peak - Suspended, Zaca Fire
06M Hildreth Peak - Suspended, Zaca Fire
17G Buck Point - Unsuspended
17H San Seavaine Lookout - Unsuspended
18A Santiago Peak - Will possibly be suspended
18B Modjeska Peak - Will possibly be suspended
21A Crafts Peak - Suspended, Butler II Fire
21B Butler Peak - Suspended, Butler II Fire
21C Grays Peak - Suspended, Butler II Fire
231 Chaparras Peak - Suspended, but Pipes Canyon Preserve plans to reopen after rain (which has happened) and the re-establishment of some vegetation, so could be unsuspended soon. In any case, George Wysup, Robert Myers and Wayne Bannister are leading this peak, with special permission of Pipes Canyon, on January 11th.

Important dates!

Just a reminder: the next Leadership Training Program Seminar is 12 April 2007. This is how you get started toward a rating.

And two other important reminders; if you're working toward an "O" rating (or keeping current as a leader), the next Sierra Club/Red Cross First Aid course is Jan 12, 2007. Contact Steve Goldstein <hatbsa@sbcglobal.net> for information.

If you're working toward an I, M, or E rating, you're going to need certification in Wilderness First Aid. The next WFAC course is May 16-18, 2008. The course fills up far, far in advance, so NOW is the right time to apply. See: <http://wildernessfirstaidcourse.org/> for information.

To all Angeles Chapter Leaders and Outings Chairs

The National Leader Standards Policy (implemented 7/1/04) indicates: "The leader of any Sierra Club Outing must........Have First Aid certification equivalent to or higher than American Red Cross Basic."

The Policy further states: "Currency - Every four years from the date a leader first met all requirements to lead an outing, regardless of level, OLT 101 must be refreshed and any lapsed first aid certifications must be renewed. Further, if a leader has not led a trip at a given level in the previous four years, then the leader must repeat the requirement to Provisionally Lead at that level or higher before leading an outing at the given level, or otherwise satisfy the Entity outing chair that the leader continues to possess the requisite skills."

After extended discussion over the last several years, the Angeles Chapter Outings Management Committee (OMC) has decided on the following implementation of the above policy requirements in order to comply with the intent of the Policy and in order to be in sync with Club requirements throughout the country. Also considered in OMC discussions was a desire to avoid a repeat of the earlier problem of having all Chapter leaders need first aid re-certification at the same time at some point in the near future.

Effective 7/1/08: To lead an outing for the Angeles Chapter:

1. First Aid Requirement (FAR) - A leader must have completed a qualifying first aid course within the four years prior to the outing. CPR does not satisfy the requirement. (A physician, nurse, or other currently practicing medical professional need not take a basic first aid course if he or she has first aid knowledge equivalent to or higher than American Red Cross Basic.)

2. Policy Update Requirement (PUR) - A leader must update their knowledge of Club and Chapter Policy through completion of OLT 101 (or equivalent) along with an Angeles Chapter Supplement.
   a. There are several ways to satisfy this OLT 101 requirement. The materials can be studied individually or as part of a group.
      iii. Group study is another mechanism to complete this requirement. Teaching plans, powerpoint charts, and role playing ideas are available at http://clubhouse.sierraclub.org/outings/Training/intro/olt101/TeachingMaterial/index.asp
      iv. Reading the Outing Leader Handbook (OLH) (revised 10/20/07) which is available for download at http://www.clubhouse.sierraclub.org/outings/common/handbook.asp.
      v. Finally, reading the first five chapters of the latest 16th edition of the Leader’s Reference Book or attendance at the Angeles Chapter Leadership Training Seminars will satisfy the Policy Update Requirement.
   b. The Angeles Chapter Supplement will document differences between Angeles Chapter and National requirements and will cover material not in the OLH. It will be available at the LTC web site (www.angeles.sierraclub.org/ltc) by 1/1/08.

3. Leader records update - When a leader completes a first aid course or satisfies the Policy Update Requirement, the leader should notify their Outings Chair when they completed the requirement. Our tracking system requires knowledge of the type of first aid course taken (i.e., whether standard or wilderness first aid) and dates for FAR and PUR completion. Outings Chairs should collect all inputs and send a periodic update of changes to the Chapter database. Also, Outings Chairs should verify that the Chapter Leader List indicates leader compliance with the requirements at the time of any outing.

The Policy requirement about having led during the last four years is still under discussion. Outings Chairs may be asked to report annually (to the OMC) the names of leaders and assistants who have led a Level 1 Outing and who have led a Level 2 Outing during the previous year, using information from the Liability Waiver forms that leaders must submit to the Outings Chairs following each outing.

Global Warming and HPS
By Karen Leverich

Dave, in his "From the Chair" column in the last issue of The Lookout, invited our comments and thoughts (or was it thoughtful comments?) about global warming and HPS. On most of my hikes in recent months, I've raised that topic and listened to the other hikers. And pondered.

First, and obviously, HPS cannot "solve" global warming. But with care, we can reduce our footprint.

Should we just stay home? There was an article (heck, an entire special issue) a few months ago in Backpacker. (See September.) They offer 100 ideas on how to cut your carbon at home and on the trail. See here:

http://www.backpacker.com/gear/11030

While staying home uses less gasoline, the things we do instead (running the air conditioning, say, or watching TV) increase our use of electricity, and increase the "need" for another coal-fired power plant. Our hiking gear and clothing, in those nifty technical fabrics, are also an issue. Leather is better than nylon for shoes. Etc. The problem is complex. I have a headache...

So, anyhow, HPS. Most of the ideas I've heard involve losing choices. For example, removing peaks from the List, so that no one has to drive very far. The problem is, what is close for some is far away for others. For a group that has such a far flung membership, do we really only want to keep people who live near the middle of Los Angeles and discard everyone else?

Well, then, how about peaks with a bad "driving to hiking" ratio? Canel Point always gets mentioned in this context. (Fairly.) Good news: George Wysup, Tom Hill, and Wayne Bannister are leading Canel Point on May 25th. They're starting on the outskirts of Kernville, and the route saves 100 miles of driving while increasing the hiking miles to twenty. An obvious, and easy, thing we can do as an organization is to document this route, so our members can choose to hike more and drive less.

Others object to peaks with "too much" dirt road driving, since they feel that requires a gas guzzling SUV. But most roads HPS uses can be driven (slowly and carefully) by 2WD cars with ordinary clearance, with perhaps the last gnarly bit of road to be hiked. "Most" isn't necessarily "all," however. I've been trying to think of peaks that can't be done without an SUV, and am drawing a mental blank. (For instance, some routes for Chief/lines/Topatopa, Old Man and Monte Arido, and Hildreth, require 4WD to obtain a permit to drive to the trailhead. But there are other routes for the same peaks that do not.) Please, if you know of some peaks that require 4WD, send me their names, and MRC can try to work out alternate routes. (karen@mtpins.com or Karen Leverich, P.O. Box 8831, Frazier Park, CA, 93222...)

What about eliminating emblems? That might discourage us from hiking our peaks. (And that is good, why?) Better would be to aggressively rideshare. For distant peaks, plan to camp over and do multiple peaks in the same area on the same trip, again reducing that driving to hiking ratio.

Anyhow, from the various conversations, the ideas that most appealed to me involved adding choices, rather than removing them. Don't stop hiking. Don't remove peaks. Instead, give us more choices. Then everyone in HPS can reduce their impact on global warming in the way that works best for them.

My modest proposal:

1) Add (and document) routes for "problem" peaks like Cannel Point. 2) Add new emblems so hikers can continue to earn emblems without having to do the peaks that (given their vehicle and home and scheduling flexibility, etc.) contribute too much to global warming.

New emblems? How could that help?

Consider these possibilities:

- An emblem for climbing 500, 1000, 1500, etc. peaks on the HPS List. - An emblem for climbing a single peak on the List, 100, 200, 300, etc. times. (To avoid getting carpal tunnel syndrome pitty-patting Rouse Hill, require each ascent to be on a different day.) - An emblem for climbing 200 peaks. (Wait, we have that already!) Well, but climbing those 200 peaks not just once, but twice, three times, etc. That is, don't do the peaks that are too far away from you, but do the others over and over, a kind of modified multiple List finish.

- Or how about doing your favorite 100 peaks, over and over again?

Any of the above would encourage people to visit and revisit our peaks, to join on our outings, and to explore, enjoy and protect our special peaks, without driving further than they want and without owning a vehicle they don't want to own.

Plus I adore emblems. This would help advance my plot to someday have an emblem for earning 100 emblems. I like choice and preserving the wonderful choices we have in HPS. So many great peaks!

Galena at its Best and Worst
November 28, 2007
By Edith Liu

On November 28, Mars, Dorothy, Martin and I headed for the headwall! The sound of the running water along Mill Creek gave this hike a wondrous experience. We came across ice falls and ice flows, a picture postcard setting.

Then a "bombshell": About half-way to the infamous headwall spray can graffiti stopped us cold. Who is defacing this pristine scenery? We continued with heavy hearts, only to discover additional graffiti. The headwall seemed to be spared from further malicious blot on the landscape. But as we reached the ridge towards the summit we had to endure more bright orange crosses, I stopped counting them.

We ought to unite the various HPS factions (the for and the against ducking/trimming hikers) and remove the graffiti. Would grey paint add to the insult? I tried scraping off a letter or two, but one would need a rock hammer. Any suggestion? Let’s get a group together and remove the paint - at least along the creek.

Iron Mountain Via the Southern West Ridge
George Tucker

I have done some maintenance work on the Heaton Flat, Iron Mountain, and Allison Mine trails during the past few years, but my September trip was the last. The principal reason is that I found a nicer, faster and low maintenance route, and have since lost interest in the standard route.

A few years ago on the old trail to Lookout Mtn. (which, BTW, like Rattlesnake, is now free of brush and yucca problems), I met a geology professor who mentioned a trail toward Allison Mine that he used for field trips. It sounded intriguing, so I went there and noticed that the ridge could be followed to what I thought was the West Ridge of Iron Mountain. In May of this year, Asher Waxman confirmed that the West Ridge not only was doable, but was once a popular route. So I tried the route, and it worked beautifully. It turns out that the actual West Ridge is the next ridge north, and the one I followed merges with it about half way to the peak. I found no evidence of humans except two aluminum drink cans, which have been augmented by a Nalgene bottle somewhere higher on the ridge.

The disadvantages of this route are the river crossings and one short section that may be class 4, which poses a problem for Sierra Club trips. Global warming should assist with the river problem, and perhaps there is a class 2-3 alternative. In any case, here is the route:

From the Heaton Flat parking area, walk upstream about 6 river crossings to Allison Gulch, which is the second tributary on the right. Follow the creek upstream to a grove of trees on the left a short distance below the final waterfall without falling in poison oak as I once did. The waterfall is an eerie spot worthy of a visit in case you go too far, but take note of the drizzle of small stones. I did a bit of trimming once and there is now an intermittent faint use trail up the stream bed due to canyoners and whoever worked on the trail. The trail goes up the left side from the trees. It previously dissipated shortly afterward, but sometime in 2006 or perhaps 2005 (judging from the regrowth of trimmed yuccas) it was converted into a real trail with switchbacks. When the trail finally turns decidedly toward Allison Mine (??), continue up the minor ridge. There are two short sections of brush, the only brush problem on the entire route aside from the knee-high thicket near the top. The first: snatched a hiking stick from my pack, but the second is now not a problem.

At the top of this subsidiary ridge is no more than 15 meters in the Class 4 range, but I was not evaluating carefully. Once on the main ridge, good routes are not hard to find, first near the ridge, then on the south side at the big saddle, then on the north side up to the rocky ridge. It becomes enjoyable once it merges with the real West Ridge at the big saddle, and there is a delightful rocky ridge section just before the summit plateau. Until a use trail is established, it seems easier to walk down the standard route. This route appears to be slightly shorter and with less total gain than the standard route, so I was back earlier than usual.
Trip Report: Bump 6320'
November 25, 2007
By Peter Doggett

On 11-25-07 Peter Doggett and Joseph Young led an HPS group to Bump 6320'. This peak is about 2 miles east of Mt. Waterman, it has at least 500' of elevation gain on every side and it has a lovely, wooded summit. The peak is in a very remote area and extremely few hikers have ever visited this fantastic summit. Bump 6320' is only about 1.2 miles from the Angeles Crest Highway, but hiking to this Adventurous Peak wasn't easy.

We parked across the street from the Buckhorn Campground exit and proceeded uphill to the low saddle between Mt Waterman and Kratka Ridge, about 1/4 mile from our cars. From this saddle we could see the Bump less than a mile away and 400' below us. We hiked down the main canyon to the top of a dry waterfall @ about 5800' elevation. We avoided the loose & un-sure rocks by climbing up about 100' on the left, before descending again back into the main canyon to a point just below our dry waterfall. The entire hike was only about 4 miles; but we had about 3,000' of gain!

Part of the route went over smooth, slippery rocks and through dense, thick brush. Our hike took Us a total of 6 hours. The canyon was almost completely dry; however, during most of the year the canyon would be wet and hiking here could be hazardous.

We all felt that this was an extremely adventurous outing to a wonderful summit. I am looking forward to a return visit next year.

Dogging the Doggetts, or Joshua Tree Weekend
December 1-2, 2007
By Karen Leverich

It sounded like fun, I love Joshua Tree, so of course I agreed.

As the weekend approached, so did the weather. But it sounded like the storm would miss the area, and in any case be well to the east by the time of the outings, so we decided to go for it. Fearing deja vu, though (Wolf was to have evaluated Ignacia's "O" provisional a few years back in Joshua Tree, there was a storm, we were snowed in here in Pine Mountain Club, and she had to postpone due to his absence), I decided to avoid the remote chance of being snowed in by heading out to Joshua Tree a day early.

This wasn't necessarily a good choice. I ended up driving across the desert, from Gorman to Lancaster to Victorville to Lucerne Valley to Yucca Valley, in the middle of the deluge. Water water everywhere, especially across the road. I tried to follow some other car, to observe how deep the water was in the seemingly endless sequence of puddles and flooded road segments. The aerodynamics of the Wrangler (if that's the word for it) were far from optimal. Even slowing to 5MPH, I'd throw a sheet of muddy water onto my windshield, and be temporarily unable to see a thing. Turn back? Go on? Was it going to get worse? Aiee! I wasn't exactly relaxed when I finally reached Yucca Valley. But I did make it safely without becoming a photo on the nightly news (motorist rescued by helicopter from top of car, that type of thing.) And I was concerned about Ignacia's Sunday outing, to Bernard and Little Berdoo, with all those miles of dirt road.

Peter's hike to Quail on Saturday first, though. We all gathered at the Denny's in Yucca Valley. It was cold. The wind was blowing. One of the potential participants asked, incredulously, if we still intended to hike. "Why, sure!" Shaking his head in amazement, he left. Some of us wondered if maybe he was the smart one. But hey, sometimes the wind is bad in Yucca Valley and fine in the park!

Right. What an unpleasant day! Battling the head wind up a hill at one point, it was almost impossible to put one foot in front of the other. Zobeida's sunglasses flew away (but were recovered). Luckily (?), the entire cast of this outing consisted of crazy peak baggers, who cherish a challenge. Peter successfully found the summit through a tangled collection of ridges and washes, and better still, found the way back to the cars. Which had heaters and provided shelter from the wind. On to a feast at Appleby's to celebrate the completion of the requirements for his "I" rating.

Sunday dawned delightful. Sunshine, no wind, no ominous clouds. The same hiker who had opted out on Saturday returned on Sunday, as did some familiar faces and some new hikers. We decided to at least attempt the road to Bernard and Little Berdoo, before falling back to an alternate plan Ignacia had made in the event the road wasn't passable.

Feh. Immediately after turning off the pavement onto the Geology Tour Road, we encountered a huge puddle, covered with a sheet of ice. Onwards! But wait, another forty feet or so down the road, another? And beyond it, another? What was that "dry" lake six miles in going to be like? Who wanted to spend hours and hours muddling on a muddy road and not hiking? We turned back, being passed as we did so by a Honda Element bravely splashing through the puddles. (I wonder how THAT went?)

Plan B. Lost Horse, but NOT on the trail. Instead, we drove almost to Keys View and parked in a turn out, then headed for Lost Horse through a series of washes, saddles, and ridges. (Note that Peter's hike to Quail featured similar terrain. These two peaks aren't that far apart, as the crow flies.) Part of the route was up a beautiful rocky wash. (Peter and Ignacia subsequently wrote this route up, and it may be presented by Mountain Records at the next MComm meeting and be formally adopted for the peak guide.)

Eventually, we sidehilled a ridge and reached a saddle. I looked down and saw the Lost Horse Mine. So, we were almost there. Take a left, head up, and... But wait, she's leading us up to the right? Well, doh!, she had it right, I had it wrong. A wonderful, unscouted, "" lead by Ignacia Doggett. Don't miss her backpack to Martinez, later in December.

We had a nice lunch on this peak (unlike Quail, the day before), enjoying the good views and the lack of the infernal wind. Then retraced our steps to the cars and the end of an adventurous weekend in Joshua Tree. Many thanks to Peter and Ignacia for the honor of allowing me to be their evaluator.

Mt. Pinos
May 14-15, 1943
By: Fred Johnson

For a long time Bob Becker and I had been talking about climbing Mt. Pinos, but it was not until a month before school was out that we finally went. Leaving school Friday after school, we drove with Mr. Wolcott as far as Sespe Gorge, where he was going to check on Mr. Biggar's week-end camping party. After waiting there for two hours, we were picked up by a man who took us quickly over the Pine Mountain ridge and down into the Cuyama to Quatal Canyon, where we left the main road about 7:15 and started for Pinos some distance away. We walked along the dirt road leading to the Monolith Gypsum mines and connecting with the Mt. Abel paved highway ten or twelve miles beyond the mines. Shortly after a small but filling dinner, one of the mine workers and his family picked us up and, after stopping a few minutes at the mines, took us about ten miles of the canyon over a road which finally became so bad that the car could no farther. After thanking the people for such a swell ride, we started out about 9:15 along the road, and several miles on, came out on the Mt. Abel. As we walked up the road, we saw strange cloud formations which amazed us both. About 10:45 we came to a maintenance station, Camp Condor, where we planned to spend the night. We knocked on several doors, but were met with no response. However, it was so cold outside, that we kept banging on a door, which was opened at last. A man gave us the keys to an empty bungalow which gave us a place to sleep and a place for a fire. We curled up close to the fire - it was cold inside too - and we soon aslepp. About 4:00 we woke up and started to fix a breakfast of mush and chocolate. At 6:30 we started out, taking our packs with us, for we weren't sure whether we would come back the same way (I didn't want to take mine, but I sure am glad Back changed my mind.) It was cold outside and frost was on the ground, but it didn't take long to warm up after we started walking along the road which was no longer paved. By 8:30 we had covered the seven miles to Mt. Abel: it was an easy walk and we had good views of the surroundings. After eating a piece of fudge and a couple raw wienies, we were on our way again to Pinos, which we could see several miles off. We had to drop down several hundred feet to a saddle and then climb up again. It was rather tiring, but very pretty. All through this country are large pine trees, so different from the other mountains in the vicinity. About 10:30 we got to what we thought was the top, but which turned out to be Sawmill Mountain. We rested there only long enough to sign the register (I saw several Sierra Club names there), and then started off again to the peak, getting there a few minutes past 11:00. We spent two hours there, taking pictures and looking at the countryside (we had a splendid view and see the Sierras far to the north). It was quite cold outside, so it was fortunate there was an airplane spotting station there. The people there were very nice, asked us in, and heated up our soup for us. The elevation is 8826', so there was still a few patches of snow around.

At last we started down the other side, hoping to connect with the U. S. 99 instead of going back down the same way. We had no trouble get down, except for a short time when we got off the trail and had to climb up rather steeply to get back on the "road", which we followed for about four hours. The "road" was long and monotonous and the farther we went the breeder we got, so our time wasn't very good. However, it was a pretty hike, and we took our time. Finally, about 5:15, we came out on a paved road some twelve miles from Frazier Park; within two minutes we were picked up by a ranger, who took us to his station a mile or two down the road. From there, tired as we were, we started walking - slowly - and after going about a mile, we were picked by two women in a Cadillac which took us not only to Frazier Park, where we thought of spending the night, but down to Lebec in no time flat. The first thing we did was to eat and eat some more. After a hearty meal, we stood out on the highway in a surprisingly cold wind until dark with no luck whatsoever. Then, after trying to get a room at the hotel without any luck, we took the bus to Castaic Junction about thirty miles away. We got there about 8:00, and before long were picked up for a ride good to Santa Paula, where we were left off at 10:00. Then we waited an hour and a half for a ride, and when it did come, what a ride! We were awfully tired and at every car that passed, Beck yelled names not too complimentary. About 11:30 a car went by, stopped, and backed up; we thought they had heard what Beck had yelled at them. But no, they picked us up. "They" were drunks who gave us a wild five or six mile ride, and then dumped somewhere between Santa Paula and Ojai. We figured that if we didn't fall down before we got there, we would get to school about 5:00 Sunday morning; so we went, slowly but surely. About 12:15 the impossible happened: a boy and his girl friend picked us up and right up to school. What a welcome ride! And how happy we were! So, at 12:45, our great trip ended. We did get back much sooner than we had expected, but we weren't very sorry to crawl into our beds.

We were the first ones from school to make the trip, and I guess the only ones crazy enough. I'm glad we went, but once is enough for me.

A Journey through the HPS Peaks
by Pamela Rowe

Four years ago, I began the HPS List. Mind you, I wasn't intending to hike the List at the time. I was just curious about those rated hikes I saw listed in the Angeles Chapter Schedule. I had become an O rated leader in December of 2003 and was pondering going onto the next leadership level. I was also looking for a challenge. My first rated hike (and my first HPS peak) was with Leaders Don Croley and George Wysup to Pacifeco Mtn in January of 2004. They told me it was an easy cross country hike, but after we got back to the cars I was hooked. I wanted to try one of those harder rated hikes to see if I was up to it. In the meantime, I was enrolled in the WTC class in WLA by recommendation from Jane Simpson. I liked her approach to recruiting me for the class. She said that she wasn't going to tell me to take the class, she just thought that I might find it helpful for getting my I rating. She was right. The year of 2003 was spent on the WTC outings and experience trips, taking the navigation check off test, getting my naturalizing hours and preparing for my three I provisional outings (all HPS peaks – Scootie, San Rafael Pk, Cornell and Jean).

On one spring day in 2004, George Wysup set up a navigation practice for me at Lizard Head. He invited several L and M rated leaders to assist me with my navigation. Don Croley, Kent Schwitkis and Patty Rambert were a few of them. At one point someone said that there were so many cooks (navigation teachers) in the kitchen, it might be confusing to the chef (me). I was flattered by their willingness to share their experience and knowledge. On the return from the peak, I was route finding and stopped the group when I found a baby rattlesnake no bigger than a pencil. Don was directly behind me overseeing my route finding and commended me for seeing such a small snake. Patty rushed up to look at it noting 'how cute' it was. That thought had never occurred to me when approaching a rattlesnake. Then a minute later, she stepped back and with panic on her face said 'where's mom.' She was one smart lady.

My first year of peakbagging I only got to 15 HPS peaks. I was still certain I was not going to finish the list and I was definitely not going to get any emblems at this pace. My drive at this point was to practice my cross country navigation skills.

So off I set in 2005 to hike the peaks to practice my navigation. In the back of my mind, I thought surely I could hike at least 100 peaks. I was only 35 years old at the time and hoped to have many years of hiking in me.

This year was a much more prosperous year for me peak-wise. I challenged myself by hiking with Edd Ruskowitz to Baldylocks (Baldy, Harwood and the three T's). I joined Barry Holchin on his hot springs/peak hike and received some navigation guidance from him on Sheep/Martinez and later on Mill Peak. I lead the peak that is my middle name – Josephine. I explored the lovely peaks in the Joshua Tree area – Queen, Quail, Ryan, etc.

In December of 2005, I took my 100th peak on top of Silver in Big Bear. It was significant for me as I come from a family of miners and I am the first generation to not to become a miner. My dad was a copper miner in Butte, Montana as was his dad. The generation before that were miners in Cornwall, England.

The third year of hiking, I was now hooked on the List. I hiked my favorite HPS peak for the first time - BIG Iron. I also had my first navigation challenge as we were summiting Cone Peak during a white out. My challenge for this year was that I made it to the top of Lily Rock which has a third class couple of steps.
main leader and found the peak quite easily. While I was signing in the register book, Pat looked at me with concern. He said that while he was used to sweating a lot, on this peak his sweat was turning to icicles so he knew it was snowing. He insisted I get the team off the peak ASAP. Mind you I am a quite petite lady and I knew I was in no position to be making any additional notes in the register that day (although I had really wanted to). So off we went, as quick as my legs could carry me. Low and behold when we got to our cars, there was blue sky and white clouds. I think we made the descent in record time.

My List finish was to Goodykoontz Peak on July 22, 2007. It was also my 100th peak I'd lead - a double emblem day for me. We had two groups meet for this hike. The first group led by Kent Schwitikis and Don Crolely arrived early and hiked Pallett first. The second group led by Tom Hill, Cheryl Gill, Jane Simpson and myself went directly to Goodykoontz. It was not an easy hike as several of the routes were closed to protect the endangered frog in the area. However, with Tom Hill's assistance, we were able to find the easiest possible route with the gentlest slope. The good news is that everyone submitted that day and I felt so much gratitude for those that showed up. I'm not sure I would have imagined finishing the List in only three and half years, but that's what it took. I was 37 at the time and spent most weekends getting the last of the peaks while working full time (plus lots of...

over time). I got by with only a Honda Civic. There were a few times I probably took her a few places I shouldn't have. The other times, I found kindness from others who assisted me with transportation to the trailheads and with navigating to the peaks.

How did I get involved with hiking and the Sierra Club? I was born in the southern part of Virginia. My mom hiked on the Appalachian trail when she was pregnant with me. I grew up in Sunland, CA and we regularly hiked at the wash down the street from us with my dog Rosa. When I was 13, I was hiking with the Griffith Park Section as my dad was a hike leader and chair of the Griffith Park Section. I don't remember hikes being numbered 25 years ago. They only had names – intro, beginner, moderate, strenuous and super-strenuous. I started off with the beginning group and quickly became a regular with the strenuous group. I hiked with a leader nicknamed 'Luke' and a gentleman named Guy Erwin. They would always tell me that after a hike like that, I could drink a beer and the calories wouldn't count. I kept having to remind them that I was only 13 and couldn't drink beer.

I've had many lovely memories along the way with the Sierra Club and with HPS. I am truly grateful for all those that helped and know that one day I too will help others out to finish their List and also new leaders looking for an O or I rating. Also, I still want to keep those navigation skills up. And if you're wondering, I still love a good challenge.

"Time is nature's way of preventing everything from happening at once."

From the Chair
By Dave Comergan

It's official. The ballots are in. They've been counted (no hanging chads here) and you have elected Wayne Bannister, Greg Daly and myself to the Management Committee for the next two years. We will join Karen Leverich, Greg de Hoogh, Jim Fleming and Wayne Voltaire to make up the Management Committee for the next year. I want to thank Bruce Craig and Chris Spisak for running for the committee. I hope they will consider running again next year.

The first order of business for the MCC was the selection of the various positions. Chair next year will be Karen, Vice Chair – Wayne Voltaire, Secretary – Greg Daly, Membership – Greg de Hoogh, Programs – Dave. Outings and Safety will be co-chaired by Karen and Jim. Karen will continue as Webmaster, Lynda Armbruster will continue as Outreach, Jim will continue as Adopt-A-Highway Chair and Wayne Voltaire will take on Merchandise. Mel Kwan will continue as Conservation Chair. There are other positions; however, they need to be confirmed before we can put them in print. This is you Management Committee for 2008. All the members have phone numbers and email addresses. All are out hiking with you on a regular basis. Don't be shy about giving your input.

The new committee takes over with the next meeting, which is January 8th at Newcomb's Ranch. In the event of bad weather, contact me for an alternate location. Those of us who don't work during the week (or play hooky) can get in a hike before the meeting. The next important date is our Annual Banquet on January 19th. There will be a reservation form in this issue of The Lookout. Please send it in as soon as possible. One of our fundraisers is the Silent Auction held at the banquet each year. In order for this to be successful, we need donations. This is a chance to get rid of good, usable equipment or items that is taking up space in your garage. Contact Jim for items you can donate.

And last, but not least, through a generous donation from Mars Bonfire, we have available money for scholarships for HPS members who want to become "I" rated leaders and need Wilderness First Aid. Contact Karen for details. This is my last act as Chair. I've enjoyed the past year as Chair and am looking forward to next year as Programs Chair. See you in the mountains.

* Editor's note: No form is needed. Please send a check for $30 per person to the reservationist, Jim Fleming, and indicate your choice(s) of entree(s) and the names in your party.

AB 1058 (Laird and Lieu) this bill directs the CalEPA to coordinate the development of a set of statewide residential green building best practices and minimum standards. (It passed to the Senate floor on a party-line vote.)
